A 19th century double fusee bracket clock

A 19th century double fusee bracket clock, the 8" white enameled dial with black Roman numerals, signed N. Sharp London, set within a flamed mahogany veneered case with scrolling carved mounts below a swept fluted pediment with a central carved roundel, with felt-lined pierced brass arched side panels below looping lion's mask brass handles, raised on squab bun feet, 42 cm high, 29 cm wide, 15.5 cm deep.

Condition Report

Case in tired condition with cracks to top and veneer missing from rear door and chips to the sides. Clock ticks and strikes but movement is not guaranteed
